Siswati

this book addresses the perennial question of how to promote africa's indigenous languages as medium of instruction in educational systems breaking with the traditional approach to the continent's language question by focusing on the often overlooked issue of the link between african languages and economic development language policy and economics argues that african languages are an integral part of a nation's socio political and economic development therefore the book argues that any language policy designed to promote these languages in such higher domains as the educational system in particular must have economic advantages if the intent is to succeed and proposes prestige planning as the way to address this issue the proposition is a welcome break away from language policies which pay lip service to the empowerment of african languages while by default strengthening the stranglehold of imported european languages one of the principal challenges of historical linguistics is to explain the causes of language change any such explanation however must also address the actuation problem why is it that changes occurring in a given language at a certain time cannot be reliably predicted to recur in other languages under apparently similar conditions the sixteen contributions to the present volume each aim to elucidate various aspects of this problem including what processes can be identified as the drivers of change how central are syntax external phonological lexical or contact based factors in triggering syntactic change and how can all of these factors be reconciled with the actuation problem exploring data from a wide range of languages from both a formal and a functional perspective this book promises to be of interest to advanced students and researchers in historical linguistics syntax and their intersection in this volume a range of authors from different international contexts argue that the notion of communicative competence in english hitherto largely referenced to metropolitan native speaker norms has to be expanded to take account of diverse contexts of use for a variety of purposes it also discusses the popular belief that language and literacy should simply be regarded as a technical skill which confers universal benefits and that it should be replaced with a social practice view that recognises situated variations and diversity this volume we believe provides a reference point for extended research and practice in these areas that will be of interest to wide range of people engaged in language and literacy education
